

OUR APPROACH

The Court Employment Project (CEP)—created in 1967—provides a safe and structured alternative to jail or prison for young men and women facing felony charges in New York City. The six-month program utilizes a strengths-based approach to help participants build their skills, address mental health and substance abuse needs and prevent further criminal justice involvement.

Through evidence-based motivational interviewing techniques and a case management model framed by youth development principles, CEP staff help participants set short- and long-term goals, take advantage of the services we offer on-site and access a network of community-based providers best able to meet their needs as they transition back into their communities.

“CASES is our chance to move past our mistakes and continue on our path to success.”

ABOUT CASES

The mission of CASES is to increase the understanding and use of community sanctions that are fair, affordable and consistent with public safety. By addressing the factors that underlie criminal behavior, including lack of education, unemployment, homelessness, substance abuse and untreated mental health disorders, CASES’ innovative programs help court-involved youth and adults re-integrate into society, thereby making our communities safer and saving taxpayer dollars.

HOW IT WORKS

Referral CEP court staff review court records, interview potential participants and discuss eligibility with attorneys. Once staff determine that a young person is suitable, they advocate for his or her diversion to the program.

Screening and Risk Assessment Upon enrollment, participants undergo several assessments to identify educational and clinical needs. Case coordinators then work with participants to develop personal goals and access the services they need to attain them.

Six Months of Services and Supervision CEP staff monitor participants' program attendance and compliance with their court mandate, providing periodic written reports to the judge with information on their progress. Participants who successfully complete CEP avoid jail/prison time. Those eligible for Youthful Offender (YO) status receive this designation within a short time after program completion, which effectively seals the felony conviction record.

Aftercare Participants are connected with schools and community-based agencies that will assist them in continuing to meet their goals after CEP graduation.
